The Late Prosecuting Attorney

The Marlinton Messenger announces the departure of the only republican prosecuting attorney Pocahontas county has had since the war, for parts unknown. The last heard from him, the Messenger says, was that he was arrested in Washington for carrying concealed weapons. This is really too bad. We remember that but a couple of years ago the Messenger was lambasting the democrats and called upon Pocahontas to get out of the woods and elect republicans. And the people believed the Messenger and elected republicans. Pocahontas is out of the woods and out of a prosecuting attorney. It is really sad. Pocahontas got out of the woods and now has a sunburnt back. The next time we take it Pocahontas gets out of the woods she will determine before hand where she is going. There are worse things in this world than woods. The woods are preferable to deserts and waste places.

Hinton Independent Herald.

We print the above without endorsement. If things like these and the tax laws do not suggest themselves to the people they are not worthy to be suggested to them. The Republican party had nothing to do with the failure of this young lawyer. He was raised a Democrat and by a queer combination of circumstances was raised by the Republican party to the responsible office within three months after he began the practice of law. The duties and responsibilities of the office proved too burdensome for a young man who had not been trained to the duties of a professional life and he just quit when if he had shown a little backbone his troubles would have disappeared like the morning mist.

His partner is a noted criminal lawyer and by the terms of the partnership took cases for the people that were indicted and the young prosecutor even lacked his aid. He also seemed to be suspicious of the bar in general not having practiced long enough to know that older lawyers are always ready to help young lawyers when they are not professionally interested.

After totting this kind of a load he quit. He had come to the point where most men would have just begun to fight. He seemed to have an idea that every man's hand was against him.

This was not so. On the contrary people were kindly disposed to him and are yet. They watched his course it is true with a kind of interest to see if he would overcome his difficulties. At out the worst that can be said about him is that he is a quitter.

Kipitig's pitiful lines came to mind: Sopped in the straight when the face was his own, Look at him entering it, cowed to the bone: But ask ere the youngster be rated of children, What did he care; and how was he treated? Ma be they pressed him too much at the start— Maybe Fate's weight clothes are breaking his heart.

Snow in June.

Assessor C. M. Conrad was at Red Oak Knobs, on the mountain between Bergoo and Leatherwood creeks, on Wednesday last week, June 13th, and informs us that he was in the midst of a regular winter snow storm and blizzard. People out of the mountain sections may doubt Mr Conrad's statement, but anybody in the mountains above Webster Springs will verify it. Even here it was almost cold enough to snow. —Webster Echo.

An Unmarked Heroes Grave

While on a tour down Elk river, I halted at the old homestead four miles below the mouth of the Dry Branch of Elk, and in company with my friend-Herron Bonner, grand-son of the hero of our narrative, continued my journey to the Whitfall Falls.

Just below the old Bonner residence about halfway between the river and the foot hill on a slight elevation, side by side repose, the ashes of the first settlers of the section viz, Bonner's. Years long ago, old father Bonner came from Ireland on an old sail ship, and took up his abode in the wilds of West Virginia on Elk river, and there remained the natural part of his life. This hardy natured one evening in June sometime in the forty's of the past century, gun in hand sallied forth to procure a venison which was abundant in those days. How ever he decided to visit a well known sucker lick on the west side of the river coming to the river near where Mr John Cowger now resides, hastily divesting himself of shoes and socks, he plunged into the river. Just as he emerged from the water on the west bank all unconscious of a large rattlesnake which lay in ambush there, and ere he could turn aside at the warning rattle, it sank its poisonous fangs deep into his bare foot. What a deplorable situation almost beyond human conception, two miles from his own home and five from other human habitation.

There in the gathering twilight also a death-like blindness stealing o'er gigantic frame, leaning on his gun he staggered back to the river and crawling upon a huge holder, he plunged his foot into the swift running water, and soon with a concision in a death-like swoon. However he was able to hobble home next morning, where he found his wife in great agony of suspense over his staying out all night. Continuing the cold water cure he was soon able to be out again, although about the same date in each successive year as long as he lived, he had a very bad foot on the venison. Many were the hardships and trials of those of our forefathers who took possession of the mountain region of West Virginia, which is the most prosperous state in the union. We do not realize or appreciate the price they paid for our liberty and success.

Harshwood for Jodie

The demorecrational convention has been called by Chairman D. C. Gallaher to meet in this city on Wednesday, August 1. Delegates have already been chosen in some counties and the indications are we shall have a large and enthusiastic convention. The present incumbent has so completely whipped out, brow beaten and cowed all opposition in his own party that the ring will nominate him without the slightest opposition, but he will find that he will have to endure to hear and outgrage upon the tax payers to explain, which will not plague him in his race two years ago, nor will he have the phenomenal popularity of a Roosevelt to carry him along at the polls this time. With a good candidate and a platform no better than by the tariff barons or trusts, and an honest friend of the people we shall have nothing to fear. The people are tired, very tired, of the party now in the saddle, the hypocrisy of its insolent bosses, the quarrels over the spoils and complete ownership by the trusts and money kings, and they mean to assert themselves at the polls. —Charleston Gazette.

Contractors must be prepared to give bond in the penalty of double the amount of bid. The usual right reserved to reject any or all bids. J. H. PATTERSON, Secy.

There is some little complaint about filling in and swearing to these new fangled tax blanks. After swearing to a blank in the manner required by law the average tax payer indulges in a few extra words in which he characterizes the form as a blank, blank, blankety-blank, blank.
